

Submitted by: Robin Eichert, robin@PeopleSenseConsulting.com

Company/Organization: PeopleSense Consulting

Type of organization: Business

Number of Employees: 1

Category: community

Challenge or Opportunity:

In my consulting practice, I see that non-profits often forgo team and leadership training opportunities due to budget constraints. These organizations need this type of learning experiences just as much as for-profit but it not usually occur.

Approach or Solution:

Each year, I hold a month-long campaign where non-profits have the opportunity to win a workshop. I donate my services so that a deserving non-profit can benefit.

Impact:

The campaign is dedicated to my dog, Grace, who is constantly teaching me the importance of giving to others. Graceful Giving now has the reputation of encouraging everyone to give back, in small and big ways. Details of this year's program can be found at www.PeopleSenseConsulting.com/gracefulgiving2018